Course Description

Decades of work in the cognitive and developmental sciences has converged around principles that provide a foundation for a science of learning with direct implications for teachers, learners and the design of learning environments. This course provides an overview of scientific findings on learning and cognition, and the implications of these findings for learning and teaching in diverse contexts.

Course Objectives

Students will:

- review major theories and approaches to learning and cognition
- review scientific findings on biological correlates of learning and cognition
- discuss the implications of research for educational design and practice
- reflect on their own approaches to learning and teaching
- formulate ideas and strategies applicable to their own learning and teaching

Office Hours & Contacting the Instructor

You can contact me through my email at fsoylu@ua.edu . Please format the subject line as “[BEP 541] Subject of email”. The “[BEP 541]” part of the subject will help me keep track of your emails, therefore please ensure that you include it in your subject line. I will respond to your emails within 24 hours.

I will conduct weekly office hours to have more extended conversations on the course content and to cover anything else you would like to ask or discuss. The office hour will take place every Wednesday, 4-6 PM (CST). You will need to reserve a 30 min time slot by visiting <https://calendly.com/drsoylu/>. You can also email me to make an appointment, if you are not available during the office hours.

Textbooks & Course Materials

In addition to articles, podcasts, and videos, which will be announced on the course website, we will read chapters from the following two books.

- Sawyer, R. K. (Ed.). (2014). The Cambridge Handbook of the Learning Sciences (2nd edition). New York: Cambridge University Press.
We will use only a few chapters from this book and PDFs for these chapters will be made available (under fair use) on the course website.
- Dehaene, S. (2021). How we learn: Why brains learn better than any machine... for now. Penguin.

We will read this entire book. The complete digital copy of this book is available from the following link, both in EPUB and PDF versions: <https://archive.org/details/how-we-learn-why-brains-learn-better-than-any-machine-...-for-now>. You can also purchase the hard-copy online.

Summary of Course Activities

All course activities, except for the office hours, will take place asynchronously.

Modules

There are 9 modules. Each module refers to a one-week segment of the class that involves:

- reading book chapters or articles
- listening to podcasts or watching videos
- writing a reflection about the contents of the module
- posting one discussion question, and
- participating in the discussions in the discussion forum
- taking short a quiz

Module Readings & Reflections

In each module, you will read book chapters or articles informing the theme for the module. You will post a reflection, accompanied by one discussion question related to the theme for the module, and post them on the discussion forum. The reflection for each chapter should communicate:

1. Your general impressions (e.g., did you like it / find it useful or interesting?).
2. At least five points you learned and found interesting from the readings
3. How the concepts and practices covered in the chapter parallel or oppose your own assumptions, ideas or professional practices.

You can also share any additional resources you have found and liked (e.g., articles, books, videos, podcasts) on the topic for the module.

Discussion Questions

At the end of your reflection, you will pose at least one discussion question for the class on a topic that you want to further discuss. The discussion question has to be directly related to the readings and the topic of the module. It should be in a separate paragraph and in boldface, so that viewers of your post can quickly spot your discussion question for the module. Before posting your question, please take a look at the previously posted questions to ensure that same or similar questions are not posted multiple times.

Participating in Discussions

The reflections and the questions posted with reflections will be our starting point for the discussions for each module. You can participate in discussions by commenting, and providing feedback and constructive criticism in response to your peers' reflections or by responding to the questions posed by other people at the end of their reflections. Since we do not have the chance to meet face-to-face, the forum discussions will function like classroom discussions. You are encouraged to share your personal and professional experiences as well as insights from the readings in your discussion posts.

You are not expected to respond to every question posed in each module, however you are expected to actively participate in each module discussion by responding to at least two reflections or questions. Your comments and feedback should be thoughtful and should contribute to the discussion (e.g., "That's a great idea!" alone does not count as participation). You are also encouraged to rate others' reflections based on how helpful they were in providing new insights to you about the content for the current module. You can do this by using the rating box under each reflection. These ratings are anonymous and won't affect the grades, but instead will function as informal feedback.

Weekly Quizzes

There will be a brief online quiz on the module contents every week. You only need to complete the readings (and podcasts/videos) to prepare for the quiz.

Course Project

Details about the project will be provided on the course website.

Due Dates

There are nine modules (one for each week). The week for each module is structured as:

- Monday – Thursday: Complete the readings
- Thursday 11:59 PM: Reflection & discussion question due
- Friday – Sunday: Participate in the discussion forum
- Sunday 11:59 PM: Discussion posts & quiz due

For each module you are expected to post your reflection & discussion question by Thursday 11:59 PM (see due dates under Schedule). The discussion board for the current module will be available until Sunday 11:59 PM, therefore you should make your contributions to the discussion forum by then. Discussion forum participation after this deadline will not be graded. Reflections & discussion questions posted after the late submission deadline (Friday 11:59 PM) will not be graded. The module quiz for each module will be available until Sunday 11:59 PM. Late submissions will be accepted a day after the deadline (Friday 11:59 PM), with a 50 % grade reduction; submissions will not be graded after the late submission deadline.

If a student refuses to comply with the requirements, the student will be asked to leave the class and reported for a conduct violation. Unless a student has an exemption from the requirement to wear a face covering, (more information can be found at <http://ods.ua.edu/covid-19-disability/>), the student will be reported to Student Life for further disciplinary action. More information on these requirements and UA Healthcheck system and screening can be found at <http://healthinfo.ua.edu/returnplan>.
